This part of the Cotswold Way is twinned with a section of the Bruce Trail, located in Ontario, Canada, as a mark of friendship and international cooperation between our two trails.

The 890 km long Bruce Trail is Canada's oldest and longest marked footpath and is maintained by volunteers. The trail spans beautiful and varied landscapes as it passes through Canada's most densely populated region, and is the only continuous public access to the Niagara Escarpment, a UNESCO World Biosphere Reserve. For further information on this wonderful trail, visit: www.bruce-trail.org

The following route description below is even easier to follow, the friendship trail has been signed at key points with a special marker disc (pictured right).

1 Leave the car park through the wall near the main entrance and follow the Cotswold Way along a broad path into Standish Wood. At a fingerpost, fork left on a permissive path to join a lane via a gap next to large gates.

2 Turn left and, where the lane joins another road, cross over and enter a track to the right of a letter box. At the end of this track, enter a large field by a gate alongside a stile. Keeping to the right hand boundary, head downhill ignoring the first path on the right, but at the second path, divert diagonally left across the field to a kissing gate in the bottom left hand corner of the field.

3 Pass through the kissing gate and join a broad track through Pitchcombe Wood. All along this path there are fine views down to Pitchcombe village with its small church and across the Painswick Valley. At the end of the track, enter a field by a metal field gate and follow the left side of the field to the next field boundary then turn right down to a gate in the corner. Continue down to a metalled lane.

4 Turn left and, where the lane bears right, keep straight on to a kissing gate onto Rudge Hill /Edge Common. This area of unimproved limestone grassland is grazed by cattle to preserve the habitat for several varieties of orchid and the rare Duke of Burgundy butterfly. To the right, beautiful views open up of Painswick and the spire of St Mary's Church. Continue straight ahead to a Cotswold Way marker post.

5 At this point, you may turn right to the Edgemoor Inn or turn left to follow the Cotswold Way all the way back to the start. Proceed uphill following a series of waymark posts to the top of the common. When you reach an old quarry, head down the stone steps and cross the road to descend through woods and turn left onto a track. From here there are clear views to the Malvern Hills and, on a clear day, to the Brecon Beacons.

Continue to another road and turn right downhill. Turn left at an old well and horse trough to climb steadily. Three slabs of stone under yew trees are known as "Cromwell's Stone" and bear the date 1643 which corresponds to the Siege of Gloucester. Continue through the woods towards Ringhill Farm.

across the Severn Vale to the Forest of Dean and May Hill. On entering the grassland, follow the fence on your right then head for the trig point on the tip of Haresfield Beacon with more spectacular views. Turn left to follow the escarpment ridge to a flight of steps which descends to a lower track leading to Shortwood.

7 Head left uphill through woods to emerge onto open grassland. Bear right and continue to the end of the promontory where a topograph sets out the surrounding countryside in relief. To your left, the escarpment runs south towards Uley Bury and the Tyndale Monument. Further right is the Seven Estuary where, on a clear day, the twin bridges can be seen. Finally, to the west, lies the Forest of Dean with the Welsh hills in the distance. Once you have drunk your fill of one of the Cotswolds' finest views, put your back to the topograph and follow the trodden path back to where you began.

Points of Interest

Haresfield Beacon and Standish Woods

Occupying a prominent position on three spurs on the Cotswold escarpment, there are views across the Severn estuary towards the Forest of Dean and Brecon Beacons. With its dramatic topography, intimate woodlands, extensive grasslands and exposed and wild promontory hill fort the estate offers a variety of contrasting experiences. The wildlife is some of the best in the Cotswolds, including the bluebells and spring flower displays in May in Standish Wood, the veteran beech trees (over 200 years old) in Shortwood and the orchids and butterflies.

Crombwells Stone

A stone monument (two chairs back to back) dedicated to the lifting of the siege of Gloucester during the Civil War of 1643-1645. The siege began on 10th August and ended on 5th September 1643. It is thought that the defenders lost about 50 men compared with Royalists losses of 1000 during the siege. The Royalist forces were said to number about 35,000 men and the defenders of Gloucester only 1500. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the Haresfield Estate was purchased by the Niblett family who are thought to have erected the monument. The inscriptions have mostly worn away, the records show that it once read: "siege of Gloucester raised 5 sept 1645".

Rudge Hill /Edge Common

Provides a fantastic 180 degree view from the top, taking in Painswick, the church, Sheepscombe and into the distance along the Painswick valley. This area of unimproved limestone grassland is grazed by cattle to preserve the habitat for several varieties of orchid and the rare Duke of Burgundy butterfly.
