At the bottom of the hill you are now at the site of the demolished Hack Mill. Follow the footpath to the right, over a small bridge, through a kissing gate and along a narrow path until you come to a stile on the corner of a large field.

Follow the Cotswold Way signs until you reach the Cotswold Warden's bench on top of Tor Hill. Stop for a rest and to admire the fine view. (ST 77136 931115).

For a slight diversion as you walk along this track you will see a wooden gate on the right. If you cross this, it will take you onto the site of Blackquarries Hill Long Barrow, where there is an information board that shows the history of the site. Retrace your steps after this diversion back to the main route

(9) At the junction with Blackquarries Hill, continue to follow the Cotswold Way and head down the hill, turn left at the road. After approximately 850m, take the footpath on the right, Cotswold Way, down into Coombe.

(10) At the end of this path, turn left, then almost immediately right and follow the road down the hill until you arrive at the pumping station. (ST 76737 93854)

(11) Take the road on the right of the pair of cottages opposite the pumping station and walk along the lane until you come to a junction. Again take the road on the right.

(12) Follow this lane for approximately 130m until you come to a switchback, then follow the road around the left-hand bend and up the hill to a junction with Rushmire Hill, the B4058. (ST 76694 94300).

(13) Cross this busy road carefully and continue on up the old sheep path on the opposite side of the road, looking out for a kissing gate on the left-hand side. Pass through this onto Coombe Hill.

(14) Admire the views and the ancient strip lynchets, as you follow the footpath around the top of the field for approximately 600m until you come to a stile, on the right, near a water reservoir. (ST 76057 94052)
